

LITTLE CIGARS AND CIGARILLOS CAN BE JUST AS DEADLY AS CIGARETTES.

- Little cigars resemble cigarettes and often have a filter.
- They are wrapped in brown paper containing some tobacco leaf and are the smallest of the different types of cigars.

- Little cigars are popular among teens and young adults due to their candy-like flavorings.
- These products are sold in a variety of flavors, including candy and fruit flavors.

- Cigar companies package some small cigars to look similar to conventional cigarettes and normally sell them in easily-accessible places that cigarettes are sold.

- Cigarillos are easily available to people with low incomes, because they are much cheaper than conventional cigarettes – often sold for less than a dollar.

EVERYDAY
LOW PRICE

- Cigarillos and little cigars are popular among African-American youth. African-American high school students are more likely to use cigars or little cigars than any other tobacco product.

- Communities with more African Americans often have more cigarillo outdoor advertising, as well as significantly lower prices.

- Cigars or cigarillos, like all tobacco products, can lead to serious health issues.

- Regular cigar smoking can increase your risk for cancers of the lung, esophagus, larynx (voice box), and oral cavity (lip, tongue, mouth, throat).

- Cigar smoking is linked to gum disease and tooth loss.
